Teaching Experience

I have taught at the university level for 13 years. I have a history of solid teaching evaluations, consistently scoring above my institutional average on student course evaluations. I have also served as an academic advisor for the past 13 years. My primary area of teaching interests focus on law enforcement, race and crime and criminal justice administration. While at the University of Nebraska I developed several courses. In particular, one addressed the issues in the administration of the death penalty and a second course that examined the Supreme Court and the Fourth Amendment. Additionally, I have taught several substantively different courses at the university level. Furthermore, have I instructed several courses including, Deadly Force, Civil Liability, Juvenile Justice, Constitutional Law and Criminal Law to a recruit class of reserve deputies.
